About the American Nuclear Society

The American Nuclear Society (ANS) is an international, not-for-profit, scientific and educational organization consisting of about 11,000 individual members, more than 1,600 organizations, 80 Organization Members, 20 professional divisions/technical groups, 51 U.S. and 9 non-U.S. local sections/affiliated societies, 14 plant branches, and 34 student sections. ANS also maintains about 30 formal agreements for cooperation with international organizations.

The Society's main objectives are the advancement of engineering and science relating to the atomic nucleus, and to the integration of the science and management disciplines constituting nuclear science and technology. Other purposes are to encourage research, establish scholarships, disseminate information, inform the general public about nuclear-related activities, conduct meetings at which scientific and technical papers are presented, and cooperate with government agencies, educational institutions, and other organizations having similar purposes.
